EXPLANATORY.

—The point of a Planet's orbit farthest from the Sun.
 —That part of the Moon's orbit farthest from the Earth.
 —Astronomical Day is reckoned from noon to noon through the 24 hours. Thus July 21, 9h, is 9th A of July 21, and July 21, 15h, is 3h M of July 22.
 —Conjunction—A Planet directly between the Earth and the Sun is said to be in Inferior Conjunction with the Sun. A Planet with the Sun directly between it and the Earth is said to be in Superior Conjunction with the Sun. Planets are said to be in conjunction with each other, or with the Sun, when they are in the same sign and degree.
 —Distance—The distance of a heavenly body from the Equinoctial, measured north or south, in degrees or minutes, on a Meridian.
 —Eclipse—The plane of the Earth's orbit, so called because Eclipses can take place only when the Moon is on or near it.
 —Distance—The distance of a Planet from the Sun as seen from the Earth.
 —Ecliptic—The circle in the heavens traced by the Earth's Equator.
 —That part of the orbit of a heavenly body which intersects the Ecliptic. The body is passing from south to north, it is called the Ascending Node; if from north to south, the Descending.
 —Opposition—A Planet with the Earth directly between it and the Sun is said to be in Opposition to the Sun.
 —Shadow—That portion of space around the shadow of the Earth passing through which the Moon diminishes in brightness, in consequence of a portion only of the Sun's rays reaching her surface.
 —Perigee—That part of the Moon's orbit nearest to the Earth.
 —Aphelion—That part of a Planet's orbit nearest to the Sun.
 —Quadrature—Two heavenly bodies are said to be in Quadrature when they are at right angles from each other by one-fourth of the Zodiac, or three signs apart.
 —Time—Declination and fast or slow of clock are given for apparent noon, and time of passing the Meridian of St. John.
 —Time—The Sun's Southing is given in Astronomical time for the Meridian passage at St. John; and her Declination, when on the Meridian.
 —Time—The age of the Moon is given from Full Moon to New Moon; and the time from New Moon to Full Moon.
 —Tides—In the Calendar are the Morning and Afternoon Tides at St. John and Charlottetown. In the Tide Table (page 13) will be found Constants giving the approximate time of High Water at each of the places mentioned in the Table.
 —Time—Sometimes be found that when a Constant is added to the time of High Water at the Port of reference the sum exceeds 12 hours; in this case subtract 12 hours from the sum and the remainder will be the time of High Water.

Water at the required Port on the succeeding afternoon or morning, according as the Tide at Port of reference was a Morning or Afternoon Tide.

EXAMPLE:

High Water at St. John January 4th,	11h. 11m. M.
“ Parrsboro', Minas Basin, add	56
	12 7
Subtract,	12
High Water at Parrsboro', Jan'y 4th,	0 7 A.

It will sometimes be found that a Constant to be subtracted, is greater than the time of High Water at the Port of reference: in this case add 12 hours to the Time at the Port, subtract the Constant and the remainder will be the High Water at the required place, for the previous Morning or Afternoon Tide, according as the Tide at the Port of reference was an Afternoon or Morning Tide.

EXAMPLE:

High Water at Charlottetown Jan'y 9th,	2h. 17m. A.
Add,	12
	14 17
Newcastle, Beaubere Island, —	4 15
High Water at Newcastle, Jan'y 9th,	10 2 M.

FORECASTING THE WEATHER.

Men have, from a very early period, studied the weather, on account of its great influence on their pursuits, in order if possible to predict its nature and prevent those losses to the Farmer and the Sailor which result from storms.

The earlier students based their predictions on the phases of the moon; but an examination of the Greenwich observations for more than half a century has shown that this theory is entirely unfounded. Weather prognosticators, Moore, Zadkiel and Vennor claim in their Almanacs to be able to forecast the weather day by day for a whole year; but meteorological science in the British Isles, and the Signal Service of the United States, with the Weather Service of the Dominion, does not claim to forecast, with any certainty, the weather for more than three or four days at the most.

If an observer could obtain, at regular and repeated intervals, readings of the Barometer at stations distributed over a large area, he would be able to trace the march of the storm, for it has been found that the wind always blows towards the place of the lowest barometer reading; and so, by means of the telegraph, he may warn those places the storm is approaching. Still, forecasts are often made, and the forecasts are not always infallible, so that the main business to be done before meteorology can be ranked among the exact sciences.

TIDE TABLE.

The time of High Water at the following places will be found approximately by adding to or subtracting from the time of High Water at the given Port of Reference, as follows:

At one minute before one o'clock the Ball shall be hoisted its full length; and at one o'clock, mean time, the Ball shall be dropped. A Chronometer keeping correct Greenwich time should be used. At the above time of one o'clock when the Ball drops, represents 5h 24m 15s at Greenwich. The error of a Chronometer may be ascertained, no matter where the ship is, by the Time Ball, as it will enable them to get the sea rate, which varies from harbor rates. Latitude 45° 16' 42" North. ## IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.

The Beet-Sugar Industry.

The following valuable Article is taken from a Connecticut Almanac, and as the climate of that State does not vary much from our own, it is hoped that our Farmers will find themselves of its information.

When it was ascertained that we were producing only about one-sixth possibly a fifth of the amount of Sugar required for home consumption, that we were importing something like six hundred thousand tons and more each year to supply our own wants, the question naturally came up, Why can we not do something to meet this demand, and thus free ourselves from a dependence upon importations? If the Sugar-cane, the Sugar-maple, and Sorghum yield us only one-sixth part of what we consume to sweeten existence, is there not some other source of supply?

It was found on inquiry that Europe, with climatic conditions not so favorable to our own, produced from seven to eight hundred thousand tons of Sugar each year, or about one half the amount required for consumption there, from the Sugar-beet, and it was the most natural thing in the world to ask why we did not do the same. It was found, also, that the establishment of this industry there had stimulated the rapid introduction of sound principles into agricultural practice, and had exerted a vast influence in developing the agriculture of every country where it had been introduced, so that improved farming was the result of successful attempts to build up the manufacture. Then could we not repeat the results which had proved so important in Europe, and thus build up a new commercial industry, and at the same time introduce a new life into American agriculture.

It is well known that we could raise the Sugar-beet in most of our northern latitudes, and many farmers had been in the habit of raising it for feed.

knowing well that it contains a higher percentage of saccharine matter, greater nutritive qualities, bushel for bushel, than the mangold. They that its yield was much less, and so the question constantly recurred, whether, as a matter of economy, it was to be preferred to the mangold for sugar purposes? It could be made to produce from twenty to thirty tons to the acre under exceptionally favorable circumstances, but under equally favorable circumstances the mangold would yield forty to fifty tons, and so the general conclusion was in favor of the latter, though some stoutly maintained the superior economy of the Sugar-beet, and it was gaining ground, though very slowly, against its competitor.

Recently, numerous experiments have been made, and large amounts of beets have been raised to prosecute this industry, and to demonstrate the fact that we can produce our own sugar, without taking advantage, it seems to us, of the experience and the knowledge which has been gained in Europe, of the conditions requisite to success. The experience of many years there has pointed out important problems which it will not do for us to ignore. These relate to the kind and quantity of fertilizers to be used, the size of the beets, the economical for the manufacture of sugar, the necessity for a long rotation, the intelligent selection of seed, some varieties containing a very much greater amount of saccharine matter than others, and to many other points, all of which have an important bearing on the final results. We have not sufficiently recognized the fact, that to raise the Sugar-beet for stock is one thing, and to raise it for the economical manufacture of Sugar is quite another.

Take, for instance, the matter of the size of the beet. The sugar-maker will have a small beet, while the farmer, who is growing the beet to feed to his stock, naturally seeks to produce a large one. Now just see the difference in composition. Accurate investigation of beets raised in precisely similar conditions, on the same land, and with the same manure, showed that beets weighing from a pound to a pound and a half, contained 15.10 per cent. of cane-sugar, while those weighing from ten to fourteen pounds each, contained only 9.73 per cent. The former contained 2.90 per cent. of foreign substances in the juice, while the latter contained 4.30 per cent. The difference is so marked, that it is quite apparent that success or failure would be likely to turn upon the size alone, if there were no others.

Now see the difference in saccharine matter, as modified by the manure used, and especially the condition in which it is applied. Beets manured with horse-manure yielded only 9.73 per cent. of cane-sugar, while beets from the same seed, and on the same land, manured with sulphate of potash, contained 13.87 per cent. of cane-sugar. The result is very striking. When fresh manure of any kind is used, the saccharine matter, in the form of cane-sugar, will be very low compared with beets properly fertilized. A large-sized beet, grown with rank, stimulating manure, will contain a large percentage of foreign substances, either saline, nitrogenous, or non-nitrogenous, and experience has clearly shown that for every percentage of foreign substances in the juice, about one and a half per cent. of sugar in the juice will become unavailable. In other words, success will depend on minute and careful attention to details, many of which appear to have been ignored in procuring the beet for the extraction of sugar.

It is evident, therefore, that if we are to expect the beet-sugar industry to become successful, the farmer must co-operate, and work in harmony with the man-manufacturer, and be willing to comply with the conditions which experience has demonstrated to be essential to success.

The Cultivation of Turnips, Mangolds, etc.

The following Letter has been kindly furnished by an eminent practical Farmer of the County of Nova Scotia. It has been read in a Nova Scotia grange and elsewhere, and has been found very useful. The information given is entirely reliable.

It is essentially requisite to have the land dry. If wet and springy, a crop will never thrive to any advantage to the grower in a pecuniary point of view. If the ground is suitable, plough well in the Fall, say six inches deep, so that the furrows will be well laid up to give the winter frost a good chance to mellow the soil. In the Spring, cross plough and harrow well so as to break all lumps of earth and to form a good seed bed: this is very essential. This will give the plants a good chance to feed their roots into the soil. This is the great secret of the market gardeners, and shows how they are so successful in raising large crops.

When your land is in good order, raise your drills 30 inches apart; take care to have them straight. This will give the horse-hoe no trouble in turning the turnips. When the drills are raised put in from 15 to 20 bushels of horse loads of barn manure to the acre in the drills. It would pay you to purchase 300 lbs. phosphate of reliable quality, or 500 lbs. bone dust. Put one bushel of the above in addition to the manure. Put this on the top of the manure in the drill before you close them in. This will bring the phosphate or bone dust near the surface, and will commence to feed the plants at once and bring them out of the reach of the fly. It will also drive the young plants down to the manure. When the drills are formed sow from 4 to 5 lbs. of seed to the acre 1 inch deep. Press the earth well on the seed to make a firm seed-bed. Five lbs. of seed is ten-fold more than would be required for growing, but by sowing plenty of seed you give the flies something to eat and will leave plenty for the young plants to grow. My experience is that young plants will grow better for the first year by being thickly sown. Thin out your plants before they get too large. In a good season they will be ready to thin in about three or four weeks from the time of sowing. Some have an idea that seed must be sown at a certain time of the moon; never mind the moon or the man in the moon. When your ground is ready—say from the 10th to the 20th of June is a good time—thin out the plants about twelve inches apart; keep your horse-hoe going between the rows, even if you should not be troubled with weeds. By constantly stirring the soil the crop is benefited, but by all means keep down the weeds. Let the crop have the full benefit of the soil; do not let the weeds have a share. It may seem to be very laborious, but if you want a good profitable crop you must have to work for it. The days of throwing in seed and allowing it to take care of itself has passed. Farming, like everything else, must be done right to make it a success. The minister, to preach a good sermon, must study it by himself. The lawyer who wishes to do justice to his client must prepare a brief and look well to the merits of the case. The mechanic must be up to date of his trade to be successful. The doctor cannot afford to remain idle, he must study up new cases. It is just as imperative on the farmer to get all the information he can to be successful as in any of the above professions or trades. It would be an excellent plan for farmers to club together and purchase books and periodicals on farming. They could be loaned out to the members.

S. HAYWARD & Co.; Wholesale Hardware and Carriage Stock,

Havana and German Cigars.

Merits of each might be discussed at their meetings to great advantage.—
A deal of fault is found with the climate of New Brunswick, especially in winter, but the frost is much more benefit to the ploughed ground in winter than it gets credit for. Let your farming be equal to the climate and you will do well.

Practical Farm Hints.

Buying plants for the orchard or garden, make it an inflexible rule never buy a second-rate tree, shrub, vine, or seed of any kind, at any price, no how cheap, when you can get a first-rate article at a fair price. If you buy goods of this kind because they are low-priced, you'll be sure to get what you bargain for. If you buy them below the real value of the best of their kind, you may be sure there is some "out" about them that you do not see.

As a general rule, for all hoed crops, plant in such a way that you can reach the hill, plant, or vine with the cultivator, and use this tool early and often.
If any crop needs clean culture, it will cost less to cultivate or hoe it eight days than it will to hoe it once in fifteen days.

Seeds can be raised cheaper than most other crops, because they will bear neglect. But they don't pay in the end. They are the little vices that ruin plant-life, and are to be got rid of the best way we know how. The first thing is to avoid getting their seeds into manure. It is almost as important to keep the manure, as to keep the land, clean. The next is to take them early.
It is cheaper to nip them in the bud than to pull them up, root and branch, when they get ahead. Here is where brain work comes in. It is work that must be done, and the problem is to keep down the cost.

The best time to cut grass is when the field shows the greatest number of blossoms. Nature fixes no particular day. Seasons vary several days, and some reach this stage of growth earlier than others. So judgment and skill must always be required to decide the question when it is best to begin. Let it be when the grass contains the most sugar, gum, starch, or other elements of food, and cure it so as to preserve these constituents, and not drive them off by too much exposure to the sun.

Do not fail to have a good tool-house, and a place for a set of carpenter's tools—saws, chisels, hatchets, hammers, an assortment of nails, spikes, and of every kind that may be needed in an emergency to replace any break-ed or duplicates of the parts of ploughs, mowing-machines, tedders, horserakes, &c. A liberal investment in these things will pay the highest per cent.
of any investment you have.

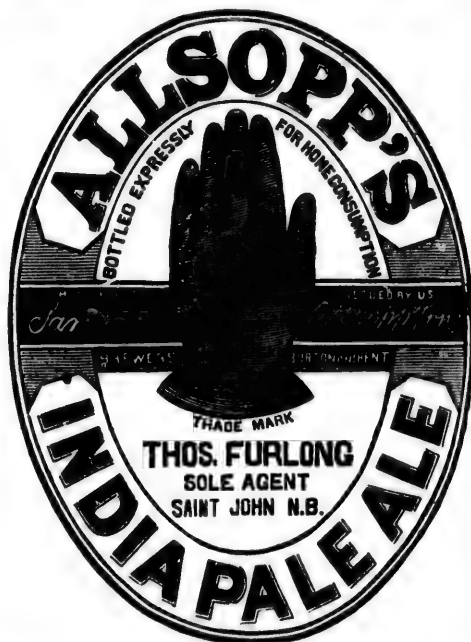

Make it a rule to plough in the Fall on level land. It is about equal to a top-dressing of manure. The exposure to freezing and thawing not only mel-lows the soil, but owing to the absorbent quality of newly-turned soil, it gets a great advantage from the atmosphere, and is in better condition than if it were ploughed in Spring, while a well-fed ox can put more strength into the plough in September than he can in May. Besides, it costs less to plough in the Fall than in the Spring.
